-The public square in the rear of the Executive Mansion is to be enclosed during the summer. Mayor McGill will be pleased to receive subscriptions in cash or material. This square might be transformed into a beautiful park, with walks, shrubbery, flowers, etc. The city fathers are well disposed in the matter, and if the community will assist in the manner suggested, this eligible but now unused square may be made a place of pleasant resort.

-Col. Wm. J. Berg, the Traveling Passenger Agent for the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway, is in the city, stopping at the Spengler House. We have just passed over this grand highway through the Blue-Grass State and the Old Dominion, and can conscientiously commend it to all who appreciate close connections, great speed, safety and com-fort, to say nothing of the grand and ever-varying scenery which this splen-did route affords. There is nothing like it, and "don't you forget it," when ar ranging your programme for a summer's absence or a business trip northward.

We regret to learn of the serious illness of Miss Carrie Glenn, of New Orcans, niece of Judge H. H. Chalmers and of the late Hon. D. C. Glenn, formerly Attorney-General of Mississippi. Miss Glenn has been occupying a position in the New Orleans Mint for about a year or more. Some months since being attacked with the disease from which she is now suffering, she re-signed her position in the Mint and came to Jackson on a visit; change of climate and rest from the sedentary life she had been leading made a mark ed improvement in her condition, and she returned to New Orleans and resumed her position. A few weeks since she was taken suddenly worse, and after securing a leave of absence, returned to Jackson, and stopped with her aunt, Mrs. Chalmers. She has been steadily growing worse and at last accounts her condition is thought to be hopeless.

Miss Glenn is a young lady of about 23 years of age. Her bright disposition, nestness of purpose—coupled with the honest desire to gain her own livelihood by the labor of her own hands made her popular with all who knew her. With these were combined an intelligent mind and a sweet disposition.

P. S. As we go to press we learn that Miss Glean is in a dying condition.

James Smith.

Among the names of gentlemen participating in the proceedings of the Southern Historical Society, at Nashville, last week, we noticed that of "Hon. James Smith, of Glasgow, Scot-Dobson and Watt sailed from New York | land." We have reason to believe that last Saturday morning on the steamship this is our ante bellum townsman, who hopes to slip in upon his relatives and old friends here without notice. He had left home for a six weeks recreation, and was in every every respect worthy of their esteem for perhaps his last visit to Mississippi, where he lived and labored in his early it follows that our estimate of their character is to manhood. He is on terms of great intimacy with Ex-President Davis, and doubtless expected to meet him in Nashville, and being disappointed thereat, we presume Mr. Smith is now enjoying tude, we have the test of character. himself at Beauvoir.

Should Mr. Smith visit Jackson, he cannot escape some sort of a public demonstration that will show the esteem ated by the purest motives. There was never any in which he is held here by the old citizens, and by a generation of young people who have heard of his good deeds charge of his duties. As a member of the and who have rejoiced at his success in College, his influence was always on the side life. We do not know when Mr. Smith of good order and of truth and justice, and yet of years prior to the war, his name was was highly esteemed by the citizens, honored by prominent in business, fraternity and his instructors and beloved by his companions. No social circles. He was one of the charter members of Jackson Fire Company, No. I, organized May 1st, 1839, and of his associates only a few survive-Messrs. C. H. Manship, John Sharp, H. B. Evans, James Black, and perhaps others.

Mr. Smith returned to Scotland in 1855. His younger brother, Robert A. Smith, (who was afterward the gallant Colonel of the Tenth Mississippi regiment, and who was killed at Mumfordsville), continued the business of stoves, hardware, etc., on the premises now ocguarantees satisfaction to all who may capied by Mr. Isydore Strauss. Mr. Smith sold this property after the war -Messrs. J. W. Gardner & Co., will and appropriated the proceeds to the public schools of Jackson.

On the breaking out of the war, Mr. Smith invested largely in Confederate bends, and by his purse and pen gave -The Masonic fraternity of this city material aid to the cause. He sent a have in contemplation an excursion that six-pounder brass piece and twenty-five will include Vicksburg, a ride on a fine Belgium rifles to Jackson. The beautiful granite shaft that marks in our cemetery the resting place of his gallant brother, was shipped by him from Glasgow. At congregation in this city, he remembered the "auld kirk" with a fifty-pound sterling draft. Obituary.

GEORGE H. PORTER, son of D. P. Porter, died it the Peabody Normal School at Nashville, Tenn. May 15th, 1883. He was born at Jackson, Miss. January 12, 1862, making him little over 21 years of ige. Few young men had so bright a prospect of sefulness before them as he had. It was his good fortune, to be blessed with the faculty of inspiring onfidence and making friends. He was in every ense of the word, reliable. There was never doubt as to what his opinion was, or what he would do, in any matter involving a principle of right and wrong. No young man had a higher standard of integrity, and with this high standard, he had the noral courage to do the right in every emergency The writer has seen him discharging his dutie imong three hundred boys, and he never failed to command respect of faculty and students. He was fortunate in its being conceded, that he could not do otherwise than what was honorable and right He was faithful in work, industrious and careful. To have him for a friend, was a privilege. He was to his father and mother, both a companion and a omfort. Few can realize the blank left behind him at the family hearth-stone. All who knew him will drop a tear of sympathy for the bereaved true womanliness of character and ear- father, mother and family. May our Heavenly Father, who knows what is best, console these grief-stricken hearts. S. D. LEE.

A Teacher's Tribute.

Rev. Dr. Roudebush being called on at the burla MR. GRO. H. PORTER, by the officiating minister to make some remarks touching the life and character of the deceased, said: That owing to the intimate and interesting association which had existed between the dear departed friend and himself he occupied the place of a mourner rather than that of one called upon to speak words of comfor

He said it was useless for him to speak of th noble traits of character of this young man to those among whom he had been reared. His manner of life from his early childhood up was well and favorably known to them all, and needed no commer to augment his virtues in their estimation. But he said, he was there to speak of what he had observed in the life of his young friend and pupil as it appeared to those who knew him at a distance and had soon learned to regard him as a youth who and confidence. If it be true that we do not know men until we know how they are accustomed to act, be determined by their conduct at home and home, and then learn their conduct when removed from those restraints, and tender associations which were calculated to keep them in the paths of recti-

In the life and conduct of this young man have the most satisfactory evidence, both at home and abroad, of a purely unselfish disposition and a ourse of conduct which showed that he was actuprinciple or a sense of right was involved. As a student he was diligent and faithful in the disexerted in such a manner as never to give offense. came to Jackson, but for a score or more but to command the respect of his associates. He youth could have more fully met all the requirements of being a reliable and useful man. The Doctor then spoke of seeing him for the last time at Nashville, where he had secured for himself the same good name which had been so universally awarded him in his own State. Wherever he was known his name was the synonym for whatever was manly in bearing, chaste and prudent in con-

After speaking of his fidelity to his young friends and associates at college and entreating them to imitate his example and to cherish his virtues, he concluded with this appropriate exhortation of the The West Jackson Firemen's Excur-Apostle's: "Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsover things are pure, whatso ever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think of these things." For these things may truly be said of him to whose memory you have paid your last tribute of respect,
